

Environmental Awareness Training

This one-day Environmental Awareness course will tell you why environment matters to your organisation and provide introduction to environmental legislation and how environmental management systems will meet the requirements of your customers.

This fully interactive course It can be used to engage and empower Environmental Steering Groups / Green Champions to be more focused and productive, ensuring that environmental objectives are achieved, and good ideas produced.

Who should attend?

Those that have responsibility for:

Developing the environment strategy and want to understand the resource and time requirements implementing environmental management at their site.
Those who are looking for a quick introduction to their responsibilities.

People who are:

- members of the environmental steering group on site
- are a direct report who manages environment
- are responsible for a specific environmental function e.g. waste or are a member of a HS&E team

Course structure:

- Environmental issues
- Environmental legislation
- Environmental Management Systems

All consultants hold professional membership of the chartered Institution of Occupational Safety and Health (IOSH).

An ideal next step for those looking to attend an accredited course we also offer the 5-day IOSH Environmental Responsibilities course. This includes a one-day optional on-site sampling day too.